DOL Fiduciary Rule to be Delayed and Dodd-Frank to be Reviewed by the President's Executive Actions

WHAT HAPPENED?	Today, President Trump signed two executive orders intended to further evaluate the regulatory actions taken by the Obama administration. The first action will solicit recommendations from the heads of federal regulatory agencies for potential reforms to the Dodd-Frank Act. The second action will force the Department of Labor to delay the implementation of the Fiduciary Rule.
WHAT COMES NEXT?	The Labor Department will have 90 days to reexamine the rule and then decide whether the rule will still be enacted. Please contact Fairview if you have any questions or concerns regarding executive actions and their potential impact.
